Director Bolte Retires After 25 Years

WAUKESHA, Wis. – Longtime Director of the Waukesha County Public Works Department, Richard Bolte, has announced his retirement from County government. Bolte will conclude his almost 25 years of county service on March 17, 2009.

“A good transportation network is the heart and soul of sound economic development. Under the leadership of Director Bolte, Waukesha County’s transportation system has been thoughtfully planned, built and maintained to the highest of standards. I want to publicly thank him for his service,” stated Waukesha County Executive Dan Vrakas.

The Waukesha County Director of Public Works manages the operational activities for highway, mass transit, central fleet and facilities operation. In addition, the director oversees the preparation and administration of the department’s operating budget and the authorization and implementation of approved expenditures.

Vrakas has appointed his Chief of Staff, Allison Bussler, as Interim Director of Public Works.
